BETWEEN THE LINES

So Long Steve

Steve Jobs resigned yesterday. Apple's stock immediately fell $5 a share in response to the announcement that the iconic leader had stepped aside. The 56-year-old founder, who returned to the company in 1996 when it was on the verge of bankruptcy, has turned Apple into the second most valuable company in the world. Steve is an innovator and a visionary. In his years away from Apple, he created a new operating system called NeXT (which upon his return became the basis of Apple's current OS). He also began a computer animation film company called Pixar, which became famous after the release of its first block buster "Toy Story."

Upon his return to Apple, Jobs immediately invested in R&D, resulting in the iMac and a new string of sleek portable laptop computers. But the invention, which truly turned the company around, was the iPod, the portable mp3 player, which enabled users to carry over 1000 songs in their pocket. Since the release of the iPod, Apple has experienced one successful product release after another. The iPod established the mobile music industry, the iPhone revolutionized the cell phone market, and most recently, the iPad redefined portable computing.

Steve will be missed at Apple, but the company's future still looks remarkably bright. You see, Steve Jobs, the visionary, was not only a man with an eye for new and creative products, but also one with an eye for talent. He has recruited some of the most talented and creative people in the world to his company, and as a result, Apple will likely continue to lead the world in innovation, since Steve Jobs' vision will continue in those he has hired.

Former Canadian Senator, Douglas Everett once said, "There are some people who live in a dream world, and there are some who face reality; and then there are those who turn one into the other." That is an accurate description of Jobs. But it is also an apt description of the child of God, who understands "who" they are and "why" they are here. The Lord is looking to raise up a generation who take hold of their identity, walk in their authority, and step forward to change the world.

Creating great technology is one thing...
changing the world through a spiritual revolution is another.
